

Internship Opportunities at Fujian Benz Automotive (FBAC)

Application Procedure:

Students interested in applying at FBAC should firstly obtain a recommendation from Dmitrij Slepnirov (HEP of IM at SDC, ds@business.aau.dk), commenting on their academic performance and suitability for the position. The application process is straightforward, requiring only a CV and a brief personal introduction. Following the submission, the HR department will schedule an interview to ensure a good fit, which is generally a formality rather than a stringent assessment.

Timeline for Application:

The application period starts in March. Interviews should be arranged during the summer, aiming for a flexible start date around September.

It is critical to complete all necessary paperwork, including a separate medical examination (details will be provided by FBAC HR) and the transition to a work visa, approximately one month before the intended start date.

Requirements for Application:

- For the Application: A CV, a short personal introduction, and a recommendation by Dmitrij Slepnirov to ensure the suitability.
- For the Employment Contract: An Internship Visa is required, along with a new medical examination (expenses will be reimbursed by FBAC).

Expected Internship Tasks:

Interns will actively participate in significant projects within the Digital Transformation Office, by either spearheading new projects or contributing to existing initiatives, with a focus on creating real, measurable impact. Beyond project involvement, interns will also engage in daily operational tasks, with the chance to suggest and implement improvements.

The role is designed to ensure that all tasks contribute meaningfully to the intern's professional development and long-term career prospects, avoiding mundane or repetitive tasks such as taking meeting minutes, excessive PowerPoint design, or file management. This approach guarantees that the internship experience is valuable, equipping interns with skills and insights beneficial for their future endeavours.
